The 500th anniversary of the beginning of the Reformation provides the opportunity to explore and reflect upon issues of church, state, and religious and cultural diversity that are still at the centre of our national life: the conflicts that divide, and the convictions diverse parts of the Christian church hold sacred – the pillars on which their faith stands or falls. How are we called to be reformed by the Gospel? How do we build the unity Christ called for with those whose convictions are very different from our own? This autumn St Martin in the Fields is hosting a lecture series, exploring some of these hopes and controversies. For more details see our website <http://sp2.forkgen.com/reformation/>
